SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP.

Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills will cure Consumption, Liver Complaints and Dyspepsia. They are all three to be taken at the same time. The seaweed is the same as that used in the sea; when the appetite becomes good, the food digests and makes good blood; the patient then has rest and the lungs begin to heal.

The Mandrake Pills must be freely used to cleanse the stomach and liver, so that the Pulmonic Syrup and the food will make good blood. The seaweed pills, the tonic and the mandrake pills are to be taken at the same time, and nothing has ever been invented excepted name (a deadly poison) which is very dangerous to use unless with the directions to start the secretion of the liver like Schenck's Mandrake Pills.

Liver Complaint is the most prominent cause of Consumption.

Schneck's Seaweed Tonic is a gentle stimulant and alterative, and the seaweed, which this preparation is made of, is astringent and tonic. It takes the food out of the system, and the patient has rest and the lungs begin to heal.

Dr. Schenck, in his treatment, does not try to stop a cough, neither does he stop a patient from coughing.

The Avianus is the peer of the aconite. Moving, running, and jumping are the result of the aconite. It takes the glands down so easy, and doesn't hurt itself a bit. But, there are some who are not so good as the aconite, and the patient has rest and the glands and rest.

Portu.

BY SARAH R. BOLTON.

Our paths were strewed with roses,
When we knew no pang or pain;
Where the red wine in life's chalice
Had not yet given us taste,
How another's love is beauty,
And our waking hours of peace,
Would not fill their boudoirs,
Nor give their hours a bower?

Our dwelling were a palace,
Where we knew no pang or pain;
Where the red wine in life's chalice
Had not yet given us taste,
Would our sympathies awaken,
Would our hearts be won,
Who has either home nor bower?

Our raiment were the fairest;
The Infants could rejoice;
The day was bright, the world was gay,
Daily adorned our glittering board,
Could our full hearts know the sorrow
Of the world, the sorrows,
Who tremble lest to-morrow
Bring gaunt famine to their bower?

If we know no lack, no losses,
Disappointment, toil, and care,
Would we not then be wiser,
Are no woes to bear?
We step on silent paths,
Frankly, who can brook it,
Would we pity him who croaks
By the wayside in the cold?

If the world were just, true,
If our doubts and fears were few;
Fewer nights and days,
If the heart were not to us;
No sweet moments to bid us,
But the world, the world, the weep?

If our loves were never blighted—
Our love is never lost;

If our strength and beauty last

The heart is dead;

Would our hearts be given
To the giver of such bounties?

Was there ever such a place?
A better place than this?

Our Story-Teller.

A STROKE OF BUSINESS.

I passed it timidly, but to my great delight he was smiling warmly.
"My dear Miss Berenson!" he exclaimed, warmly, taking me by both hands, "this is indeed a pleasure! Sit right down here, and tell me what is the matter; for I know that you never would have bearded the old fellow in that way."

"There is no great dirt in the matter," said I, desparately, as I began to feel my nicely prepared speech slipping entirely away from me.

"I am sorry to hear it," he replied, looking grave immediately, and evidently expecting something worse.

I tried to begin again, but it would not come, and exhausted with nervous excitement I burst into tears. Then everything came out in a perfect stream, without being "worted" at; and there was the strongest language, the most profane and profane, and the intention of buying a house in the same breath that I acknowledged myself unable to pay for one room, until my hearer looked quite stunned, and evidently began to wonder if I had lost my senses.

Then he looked amused, and presently said: "My dear Miss Berenson, you will accept this matter rationally. You wish, I say, to buy a small house, that you may have a more desirable room for your school, and lessen the expense of rent; this strikes me as a particularly sensible idea. As to the money part, you will not be obliged to pay that when you come down. How much have you at your command?"

"I have just one thousand dollars in the world," I replied shortly.

"One thousand dollars!" repeated Mr. Portman, in a tone of voice that could hardly contain it. The daughter of my old friend Edward Mapleton related to this! Why did you not let me know it before?"

"I would not have told you now," said I, proudly, "had you not asked me."

The old gentleman walked about the office shaking his head, and in a way that was not propitious.

"I am not so very much to be pitied," said I, determined to assert myself of the last; "but to you, and I have a good heart, and I have a good head, and I have a good soul."

"I am not so very much to be pitied," said I, with a smile; "but to you, and I have a good heart, and I have a good head, and I have a good soul."
